What's Hot

Get Out of the Rough. Get Into the Zone.

An anyone who has ever picked up a club knows that golf can be more than a little stressful. And that's just for us amateurs. Imagine having your entire year's paycheck riding on a single putt. That's the kind of pressure the pros deal with all the time. But a lot of them have found a way to alleviate this occupational hazard. It's a piece of equipment that's sweeping the tours, a piece of equipment Time Magazine recently hailed "The Bogey Buster."

Its real name is the QLink (www.QLinkGolf.com), and while it looks simple, its power is undeniable. This compact pendant, worn around a golfer's neck, has been used by more than 300 touring players since it was introduced to golfers several years ago. Its positive effects have been confirmed by multiple University-based published scientific studies.

Co-developed with scientists from Stanford and the University of California, the QLink utilizes Sympathetic Resonance Technology™ (SRT™), which experts say significantly increases focus and concentration, in other words, "The Zone."

Tod Sinding, Director of QLink Golf explains, "To understand SRT, picture a table with hundreds of musical tuning forks. The first fork is struck, which then causes the one next to it to resonate sympathetically, and so on until all are resonating. Consequently, the field is strengthened."

QLink simply acts like a tuning fork for the electromagnetic energy or biofield that surrounds your body, which affects your ability to cope with stress. You just feel more balanced, more focused."

The Proof is in the Players

Who could forget Ernie Els' victory at last year's British Open during the four-man playoff? According to Rick Provost, PGA Tour trainer, Els called the QLink "magical" in describing its ability to keep him calm and focused during the tournament.

Two years ago Golf Magazine profiled the QLink as one piece of equipment that would most likely become a favorite among golfers. Since that prediction, more than 90 tournaments have been won by QLink wearers—14 of the victories by players who had started wearing the QLink just 5-10 days prior. Three of those five players – Mark Calcavecchia, Scott McCarron and Jesper Parnevik — won within 10 days.

PGA Tour player Tim Petrovic adds "To be more focused and consistent, the QLink is a must, as important as a driver or a putter... it's a necessity." With such testimonials, it's no wonder that 10 of the 12 members of the winning 2002 European Ryder Cup team were wearing QLinks during the tournament, or that 50-60 Senior Tour players and 40-50 LPGA players are regular QLink wearers.

While you may not turn pro overnight or win a Major just by wearing a QLink, there is clearly enough evidence to show that you will—like the PGA pros—find yourself handling stress easier—on and off the course. There's a 90-day, money-back guarantee and lifetime warranty, so you have nothing to lose by trying it out. QLink is currently offering free shipping when you mention Golf Magazine.

PGA Tour player and QLink wearer Tom Pernice, Jr. is tested by David Rupley, MD, with FDA registered stress testing equipment used to test hundreds of players at PGA tournaments.
